

Laying down a path in walking

Tim Barrass

3/12 April 2001

Tim Barrass' black and white images summon (not in any particular order) the following associations: A proliferation of bacteria in a petri dish.

The interconnected tracks of borers.

An infestation of tape worm in a dog's gut.

The activity of a brain engaged with a memory or idea.

The behaviour of shoppers on boxing day.

Lightening unable to find ground.

A river's tributaries.

A solar flare and a tangle of blackberry bushes.
