In May 2009 I built the structure for a 'no-dig' garden in an old wood yard in West Bromwich. The outline took the form of an 1856 anatomical drawing of the brain by surgeon and medical illustrator Henry Van Dyke Carter. Over twenty types of vegetables and herbs grew until mid-November. At different stages of growth I invited three brain specialists to come and visit the garden. We discussed its condition and they provided me with some progress. This project works as a meditation on the potential of thought, change and growth. The space between neuroplasticity and permaculture.
Brain Garden 2009 - 2010. Garden site Ansoy and Kibben, West Bromwich.
